The American Revolution was the campaign by the American colonies to gain independence from Britain. It began in the 1760s when the friendly relationship between Great Britain and the colonies became strained. The British king, George III, needed money to pay for a recent war against the French and to help with the cost of ruling over Britain's huge empire. The king decided to tax the ...

It meant that all legal documents and printed papers used in the American colonies had to have an official stamp. The result was that every piece of paper the colonists used was taxed by the British. This act was passed in England without asking the American colonies, which many colonists found unfair. They were being taxed by a government that did not allow them to take part in political ...
